

JAPANESE ARMY GAINS GROUND

Troops Are Landed North Of Vladivostok To Invade That Fortress.

SAYS JAPS ARE NOT ALL ANGELS

Baron Hayashi's Opinion Is That The Japanese Will Not Be Even Half Way Moderate In Their Demands For Peace.

Tokio, July 19.—The envelopment of Vladivostok soon will be an accomplished fact, as a Japanese army has landed north of the city. The Russians cannot arrest its advance.

American Ship Strikes Mine.

St. Petersburg, July 19.—It is rumored here that an American ship struck a floating mine between Port Arthur and the Elliott Islands and sank with all hands. The date of the accident is not given and there is nothing to confirm the report.

Would Depose Czar.

St. Petersburg, July 19.—A sensational rumor is current here that a large party of the zemstvos and doumaists at Moscow are in favor of the proclamation of the deposition of Emperor Nicholas and the establishment of a regency for the Grand Duke Alexis-Nikolavitch (the infant son of the emperor and heir to the throne), under four grand dukes.

It is alleged that for this reason the meeting of the all Russian zemstvo and doumaist congress, which was to take place at Moscow, has been prohibited.

W. Witte had a final interview with Emperor Nicholas at Peterhof. Foreign Minister Lamsdorf was present, showing the complete harmony of views between Mr. Witte and the foreign minister.

Japan Doubtful on Peace.

London, July 19.—Baron Hayashi,

the Japanese minister here, said that Russia had appointed good men as peace plenipotentiaries. Nevertheless even Mr. Witte and Baron Rosen had not inspired Japan with confidence in a favorable outcome of the negotiations.

"We do not know," the minister added, "what powers have been delegated to them, and after the events of the last eighteen months Japan puts faith only in accomplished facts. The terms will be communicated only at the conference. Then we will discover what powers the Russian plenipotentiaries possess."

It was suggested that the general opinion prevailed that the Japanese terms would be moderate.

"I cannot see where people get such an idea," replied the minister. "The public evidently mistakes the Japanese for angels."

Japan, Raises More Ships.

Tokio, July 19.—An officer who has arrived here from Port Arthur says the Russian cruiser Bayan, which was sunk off Port Arthur was raised and towed into the inner harbor. The battleship Peresviet is navigable under its own engines. Both these vessels will come to Japan shortly to finish repairs. The battleships Retvisan and Pobieda and the cruiser Pallada are expected to be at Port before the middle of August. The attempts of the Russians to blow up their ships hardly damaged their vital parts.

RATE COMMISSION ON THE NEW STATE LAW

Say That It Is More Liberal Than the United States Statutes in Many Respects.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPTS-M'RAE]

Madison, Wis., July 19.—The Wisconsin railroad rate commission is not disposed to make a more drastic enforcement of the law passed by the last legislature than is made by the interstate commerce commission of the law which regulates commerce between the states. This inclination of the commission was shown yesterday at a hearing in which 60 or more land agents from all over this state appeared before the commission to seek relief from the action of the railroads in discontinuing the low rates for land-seekers on account of a doubt as to whether the new law allowed them. The roads refused to continue these rates until the commission had made a ruling, interpreting the law. The Wisconsin law, in the clause regulating reduced rates, was copied from the interstate commerce law, except that the Wisconsin law allows party rates, not mentioned in the interstate commerce act. Commissioner Barnes, with the apparent approval of the other commissioners, said that he did not see why the railroads should doubt their right to grant rates under the Wisconsin law when the Wisconsin law is even more liberal in this respect than the interstate commerce act. There is shown to be an inclination on the part of the commission not to render a hardship to Wisconsin in the matter of immigration and land improvement.

The land agents took advantage of their meeting here to form a permanent organization, to be known as the Wisconsin Immigration and Development association, and to be incorporated without capital stock, for the mutual benefit of the members.

State to Washington Much
Earlier Than Is Customary.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Washington, July 19.—It is expected that Secretary of War Root will be compelled to supervise the affairs of the State Department almost immediately from the importance of certain affairs, notwithstanding the fact that he will not take up his residence here until the early fall. A high official of the government said today that President Roosevelt is anxious to have Mr. Root take up the canal question, although it does not come directly under his department, because his judgment is needed regarding the advisability of transferring the control of the canal entirely to his hands. If Mr. Root agrees to such a plan, it will meet with the approval of Secretary Taft and greatly please the President.

BANK CASHIER UNDER ARREST

Edgar County Bank Officials Charge Embezzlement To Their Trusted Employee.

ALLEGED SEVERAL THOUSAND DUE

Claim Is Made That Foreign Correspondence Ledger Damaged In Recent Explosion, Would Show A Large Deficit.

Paris, Ill., July 19.—

Interest in the Edgar county bank-wrecking mystery revived yesterday when W. W. Juntgen, the bookkeeper who was injured so mysteriously at the time of the explosion, was arrested on a federal warrant charging him with embezzlement.

Following the arrest Juntgen gave bond in the sum of $10,000 for his appearance at 4 o'clock p. m. today. The complaint, which is joined in by J. H. Parish and R. H. Kile, president and cashier of the Edgar county bank, charges the abstracting of funds to the amount of $7,500 by means of false entries.

Errors in Foreign Accounts.

Juntgen was in charge of the foreign correspondence ledger and this book was the only one damaged in the explosion. A large part of it was blown away and the remainder mutilated and burned. It has required several weeks of patient work to supply the missing accounts, but this was accomplished by the slips of original entry which were on file in the bank's temporary quarters and were not in the vault at the time of the explosion.

Claims Proof Is Positive.

Parish states intervention of the federal authorities was solicited by the bank officials in order to remove the case so far as possible from any local influence.

He declines to make public the details of the shortage, saying it is not desirable to expose the hand of the prosecution any further than necessary.

He says, however, the proof of Juntgen's guilt is absolute and that action would have been taken sooner but that the district attorney was not entirely satisfied as to the question of jurisdiction and desired to investigate.

STATE NOTES

William Rogers of De Funiak Springs, Fla., was nearly strangled to death by a boy whom he was carrying on his back while swimming at Broadhead. The boy clung so tightly to Mr. Rogers' neck that he was unable to call for help. Timely discovery of his plight by some boys in a boat nearby saved their lives.

According to the assessed valuation of the city of Marinette is worth this year in the neighborhood of between $5,000,000 to $6,000,000.

Alexander Gladofski, a section hand, was struck by Wisconsin Central passenger train No. 2 near Amherst Junction and instantly killed. Harry Raymond of Kenosha has received from the British government a Victorian medal for bravery in the South African war.

Mrs. J. E. Wenk of Marinette received an electric shock while she was turning on a light in the basement of her home which nearly caused her death. She is still suffering from the effects.

From returns received by the census enumerators it is estimated that the population of Fond du Lac and its suburbs, North Fond du Lac, will run past the 20,000 mark. Fond du Lac had 15,000 inhabitants in 1900. The main river drive with its 100,000,000 feet of logs is expected to reach Grand Rapids Monday morning, and it is thought that the whole of the work of carrying over the immense amount of timber through these rapids will be finished in about three days.

Lillie Johnson, aged 16, of Waukegan, who has been working in Madison as a domestic for six months, has disappeared. She left on Saturday and has not been seen since. The mother is heartbroken. She will continue her search in Milwaukee.

Men are at work on the Menominee side of the river at Marinette dragging for the body of Duncan McGregor, the Peshtigo lumberman. According to the best information he was seen last in Menominee and if he fell in the river it is believed his remains will be found in the vicinity of the Kirby-Carpenter docks.

FIGHTS FRAUD ORDER ISSUED BY CORTELYOU

District Attorney Claims Use of Mails
Is Mere Privilege Which May Be Curtailed.

St. Louis, Mo., July 19.—Arguments were begun Tuesday before Judge McPherson in the United States circuit court on the petition filed by Edward G. Lewis asking that the fraud order issued by Postmaster General Cortelyou denying him and the People's United States bank the use of the mails be set aside. At the opening of court District Attorney Dyer filed an answer to Lewis' petition for an injunction he alleges congress has authorized the postmaster general to issue such a fraud order such as that against the Lewis bank and has constituted him as a court of last resort in such cases, and that under the congressional act the postmaster general's action can not be attacked in a court of equity unless he is charged with fraud or malice.

"The use of the mails is a mere privilege conferred by congress and therefore the withholding of the privilege for reasons authorized by congress is not a violation of the constitution," Mr. Dyer claimed.

In accordance with the terms of the "fraud order," all mail addressed to Lewis and the bank was returned to the senders on and after July 8 until July 12, when a temporary restraining order was granted by Judge McPherson directing the postmaster to hold the mail in the St. Louis postoffice pending a decision on the application for an injunction filed by Lewis.

YOUNG MEN SIDE STEP TEACHING

PROFESSION HAS LITTLE ATTRACTION FOR STRONGER SEX.

BUT FOUR AT THE INSTITUTE

One Hundred and Fifty-Four Girls from Different Parts of the County Attend.

Before the opening session of the Rock County Teachers' Institute in the high school building, this morning there were one hundred and fifty-eight young people on the enrollment. Of these the overwhelming majority are of the fairer sex, four boys only being in attendance. This number of men is smaller than usual and it seems that the side-steps from teaching in the country schools made by the young men become longer and longer each year. As a permanent occupation grade school instructing no more has any attraction for high school graduates of the stronger sex and those who feel unable to work their way through normal school, college or university to attain the higher pedagogical places, prefer to labor a number of years to save money at some occupation other than that found in the school room. The following roll of those attending is arranged, according to the postoffice addresses and not the places of residence, many living on rural routes from the town, under which their name appears:

ONLY CIGAR IN ITS CLASS.
Smith Drug Co. Never Saw Cigar Before that Equaled Chico for Same Money.

While there are many cigars that are just as good as Wadsworth Bros' Chico, it is in reality in a class by itself, for no other as good sells for 5c. Cigars that equal it sell for 10c and more.

In asking Smith Drug Co., who have the local agency for the Wadsworth Bros' Chico, how this could be done, Mr. Smith said that it was owing to cutting out the middleman.

"We buy the Chico direct from the factory in Birmingham, and while it costs us more than any other 5c cigar in our case, yet we are glad to sell it, for it makes new friends and customers for our cigar department."

Anyone who enjoys a clear Havana smoke, whose taste is cultivated so that he knows a good cigar when he smokes it, should try a Wadsworth Bros' Chico. It's in the blue ribbon class, and all alone.

EXCELLENT WEATHER FOR ALL THE CROPS

Favorable Reports From Farms All Over Wisconsin—Cut Worms Doing Some Damage.

Wisconsin Crop and Weather Bulletin for the week ending Monday, July 17, issued by the Weather Bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture.—The weather during the past week has been much more favorable for the advancement of farm work, as the increased temperature and a cessation of heavy rains have caused a material improvement to growing crops in general. In some sections the growth has made such progress as to cause some lodging of grain. The greater portion of the state has been free from rains except along the lake, where continued wet weather and low temperatures retard the proper growth of vegetation and grains and delay haying, causing some loss to the crop.

The condition of the soil has greatly improved from drying, although some low lands still remain too wet for the proper securing of the hay crop.

Winter Wheat and Rye are about ready to cut. The outlook for these grains has materially improved. The straw is strong and of good color, and the lodging caused by the heavy rains and high winds has given way to a great extent under the influence of the dry weather.

Spring Grains continue to make extremely rapid and heavy growth. In some localities complaint is still made of lodging of the grain from local storms but on the whole the stand is strong and firm. Oats and barley seem to have suffered the most from the winds. Little complaint of rust.

Corn has made rapid improvement; the color has improved to a great extent, and the growth, especially on high land, is greatly advanced. Some fields are beginning to tassle. In the eastern portion of the state the crop is backward, owing to the rains and continued cool weather. On the whole the outlook is extremely good.

Potatoes in the greater portion of the state made great progress; the growth is much stronger and the color much improved. A continuation of good weather will greatly benefit the crop, even where it was thought to be a total loss.

Tobacco is making excellent progress; the plants are strong and healthy and the prospects very encouraging. Cutworms are doing some damage.

Grass and Pastures: Although the past heavy rains have been detrimental, the outlook is much improved. That portion of the crop which was cut just before the beginning of the heavy rains was badly damaged, and on some lowlands proved almost a total loss. Except along the eastern border of the state haying has advanced rapidly and the greater portion of the crop will be secured in good condition. Timothy cutting is in progress and the yield is abundant. Pastures are improving and the growth is rapid.

Minor Crops: The pea crop has improved, although it was injured in some sections. Sugar beets are excellent. Gardens are improving generally.

Fruit: Strawberries are generally about gone for the season. Raspberries and cherries will be heavy yields, as the trees and bushes are loaded with fruit. Currants show a good yield. There is considerable complaint of blight on apples and plums, but the outlook is considered satisfactory.

From Correspondents.
Blue Mounds, Dane county: Rye is about ready to cut, and is a heavy crop; corn is growing fast, but fields are weedy; warm, dry weather is needed.

Sandusky, Sauk county: Winter wheat ready to cut; barley and rye heading out and well filled; hay crop up in good shape; corn and potatoes looking fine.—Ed. Markham.

Caldwell, Racine county: Frequent showers have interfered with haying, causing much loss; corn is improving, but needs cultivating; early potatoes are a fair crop.—Delbert Utter.

Mt. Sterling, Crawford county: A large amount of hay has been damaged by rains; corn making rapid growth and has good color; oats are a good crop but lodged on rich soil; young clover in excellent condition.—F. F. Bell.

Section Director.

PEOPLE ARE MOST DRIVEN BUGHOUSE

That is, the insects. Corall the Droop ing Specimens of Willet HUMANITY Behind Screens.

All rules of handkerchief flirtation have been called off in Janesville for the time being. When you see an attractive man or woman waving his or her handkerchief, apparently in your direction, it is no sign he or she is trying to start a flirtation. Such a conclusion made these days would be wide of its mark. Probably a lot of most estimable and well behaved people have been under suspicion as they walked the down town streets the past few days. The cause of the epidemic of handkerchief waving is due to the horrid gnats, mosquitoes and other insects that have invaded the city.

Discomfort on Discomfort.
For the last few days the weather has been hot enough to give all the discomfort mortals should be called upon to endure, but with the "bugs" added there was call for every effort to keep comfortably cool and quiet.

Punk for burning on porches evenings has been in great demand this season. The moisture of the spring and summer has hatched the flies, gnats and insects of all sorts, and over the city there has been a cloud that has forbidden outings and picnics unless protected by screen helmets and a plentiful supply of "dope" to keep away the pestiferous insects.

The past two or three nights have been the worst of the season for bugs. They have been impudent, they fly into your faces, lodge in your neck and enter eyes and mouths, and cause a general itching where they carrom in their flight from brow to cheek.

Those Steel Agured Ones, Too.
The mosquitoes are fierce and they have come to the city in flocks during the past few days and assisting the gnats and other bugs in making life miserable for those who are out of doors. The mosquitoes are all very tame and do not confine their terrible work to the time of darkness alone and it is not an uncommon thing to see a man enjoying a feast at your expense right a midday.

Those whose porches are screened are able to keep cool by remaining in the open air where they can laugh at the insect pests, outside the barrier but those who are on the streets were forced to grin and bear it, sweeping the bugs away with handkerchiefs and giving vent to their feelings in more or less violent language.

INTERESTING TO TREE OWNERS

TREATISE ON COTTONY MAPLE SCALE IS PREPARED BY PROFESSORS AT BELoit

Experts in Biology in Beloit College Prepare an Interesting List of Recipes.

With the pest of Cottony Scale on the maple trees throughout the city and the pest of seventeen year locusts ravaging the oak trees throughout the county the treatise on the Cottony Maple Scale and the seventeen year locusts prepared by Professor H. D. Densmore and J. R. Risser of Beloit college will be interesting to all the readers of the Gazette who have noticed the destruction of the shade trees by these pests. These papers were prepared at the request of Mr. F. Morgan who desired to have some accurate authority on these pests and especially how to combat them and preserve the trees of his magnificent farm near Beloit. The papers are divided between the two subjects and are printed in part below:

The Report.

The specimens presented are the "Cottony Maple Scale," belonging to the order Hemiptera, in the insects. This word comes from the two Greek roots, meaning "half wing" because of the form and shape of the wings of the different forms classified under this name. To this group belong all the true lice parasitic on vertebrate animals, the "mealy bugs" and plant lice of the green houses and also the orange scale (San Jose scale) of California and Florida and other tree sucking insects; the cochineal insects of Mexico and the scale insects of India from which lac is made.

All the forms are characterized by having strong mouth parts for penetrating the outer skin layers of the trees and plants which they infect, and also are arranged for sucking the juices. The Cottony Maple Scale infests mostly the maple and elm trees of this country.

The following notes are taken from the "New York State Fish, Game and Forests" reports for 1905. The original article and plates can be seen at the Beloit College Library.

Description.

This pest most often comes to notice after the females have attained their full growth late in June or early in July and have excreted an abundant cottonlike substance, which protrudes from under the scale covering the insect, as represented at figure II, on plate 3. The cottony fibers are full of minute eggs and young. A recently hatched scale insect is represented very much enlarged at figure II, on plate 3. The young soon forsake the protecting filaments of the mother, wander to the leaves, settle along the veins as a rule, secrete a scale covering and in the fall present the appearance shown at figure 12, on plate 3.

Life History and Habits.

This species is very prolific. One female rarely deposits less than 500 eggs and must frequently produce over 2,000, as estimated by J. D. Putnam, who has published an exhaustive paper on this species in the proceedings of the Davenport Academy of Natural Science, of Iowa. Certain facts regarding the life history of this insect are taken from his treatise on this scale insect. The young leave the mother in immense numbers about the latter part of July in the latitude of Albany, N. Y., and establish themselves on the under side of the leaves. Some may be found on the upper surface, and occasionally they attack the more tender twigs. The insects are yellowish for a time, the females showing deep red markings about the time the delicate two winged males appear, and later change to a brownish color, and migrate to the under side of the twigs shortly before the leaves fall. Mr. Putnam found that the males appear from August 1 to September 15th, pair, and then die. The females pass the winter on the under side of the twigs and in the spring increase rapidly in size and secrete large amounts of honey dew, which gums the leaves and smears everything beneath the infested trees. The insects soon begin to excrete the familiar cottony matter in which the eggs are deposited and by July are very noticeable when present in numbers.

As is well known, this pest is most destructive to the soft or silver maple, though it occurs on many other plants. It also attacks other species of maples, elms and grape vines. The above named species are the most important plants which are most seriously injured.

Method of Distribution.

The young of this scale insect are carried from tree to tree in about the same manner as allied species. Birds, other insects and even spiders frequently infesting trees are often compelled to assist in the distribution of this pest by the active young crawling on them as they rest on the twigs. Once a young scale is on a bird's foot or on an insect, there is a good chance that it will be carried to another tree before it leaves its host. Winds probably aid somewhat in the dissemination of the pest, and it is undoubtedly carried on infested trees which may be shipped to distant parts of the country.

Natural Enemies.

Fortunately this prolific insect has a number of natural enemies which aid much toward keeping it in check. The lady birds, especially, might be mentioned as especially of aid in the destruction of the scale. Then there are mentioned various lace winged fly larvae and some Lepidoptera which feed on the young of the scale insect and also a mite has been found to attack the pest.

Remedies.

Brushing with a stiff broom will dislodge many insects. This should be done before the young scatter and would be more effective if the brush was dipped frequently in kerosene emulsion or other insecticide. Professor C. M. Weed states that this pest can be fought with a considerable degree of success by washing them from the tree with a stream from a hose. When there is a good head of water this might prove the best method of controlling the pest. Otherwise, infested trees must be headed in and sprayed with kerosene emulsion at the time the young appear. Prepare the emulsion as follows: Dissolve one-half pound of hard soap in one gallon of boiling water and while still hot add two gallons of kerosene and emulsify by passing rapidly through a force pump till it assumes a uniform creamy consistency and oil does not separate. Dilute this with ten parts of water before using. In limestone regions use the sour milk emulsion composed of one gallon of sour milk and two gallons of kerosene, emulsify and dilute as described above.

Seventeen Year Locust.

The locust appears during the last half of May and disappears about the fourth of July. The eggs are deposited in pairs in terminal twigs of different trees. The young (larvae) hatch out in about six weeks, drop to the ground, in which they live seventeen years, feeding on the roots of trees. When about to transform into the adult winged form they ascend to the surface and moult (cast off the larval skin), and fly about in the form seen this spring in this locality. Different broods of course come out in different years and hence they may or may not be seen in any given year. Some damage is done to trees where large numbers of these insects mature the branches of trees to lay their eggs. The damage done by them is not of great consequence, however.

Farmers who distribute their own produce from house to house are not peddlers and hawkers and do not come within the provision of the peddlers and hawkers' law as enacted at the last session of the legislature. This is the decision in brief, as rendered in an unofficial opinion by the attorney general, in response to a verbal remonstrance by a delegation of Milwaukee vendors, who objected to allowing farmers to compete with them in the sale of vegetables. In rendering his opinion the attorney general quotes with approval the language of a high court, to the effect that farmers do not come within the mischief which a peddler's license law is designed to correct, except that they are the victims of this mischief. The opinion is as follows:

"It has been held by the supreme court of the state of Pennsylvania that farmers who sell products raised on their own farm by driving through the streets of the city and stopping at such times and places as their business and customers require are not hawkers and peddlers within the meaning of an ordinance requiring a license for hawkers and peddlers."

"Speaking in regard to peddlers and slating reasons why the business should be licensed and regulated under the police power of the state, the court says:

"A merchant or storekeeper is resident, has a fixed place of business, where his goods are shown to those who come in search of what they need, where he can be reached by process, and compelled to make good his warranty of the quality of his wares. The peddler is a transient with no fixed place of business, who seeks customers by invading their homes, and makes sales by persuading people to buy what they do not need, and who, by the time he is wanted to answer for his representations and engagements, is out of sight and out of reach of process. It is this matter of tracking a laboring man or woman into the home, and laying siege to him or her by an unscrupulous and self-possessed stranger, who is after money and has no delicate scruples about the manner in which he gets it, that has made the peddler a dread in the country and in the villages, and has led the lawmakers in this and other states to put the business under strict regulations when it is not wholly forbidden."

"This is the only construction I have been able to find, which determined the relation of a farmer who sells his produce to a statute or ordinance regulating peddling, and which are not peddlers. I accept that interpretation of the law and hold that a farmer selling the products of his soil either in wholesale lots or at retail is not a peddler."

"In reply to your remark about peddlers taking out licenses until this question has been determined in court, I will say that I believe this act to be constitutional."

CROP OUTLOOK VERY PROMISING JUST NOW

Government Reports Show That Temperature Has Been Most Excellent the Past Week.

The weekly bulletin of the weather bureau summarizes crop conditions as follows:

Favorable temperatures prevailed during the week ending July 17 throughout the country. The intense heat on the Pacific coast during the latter part of the previous week was followed by decidedly lower temperatures. Heavy rains interfered with work in the Ohio valley and over a large part of the south Atlantic and east gulf states, but a very general absence of rain in the west gulf district, with only light showers over Mississippi valleys, afforded favorable opportunity for much-needed cultivation. Rains would be of great benefit in the southern plateau region.

Corn Makes Good Progress.

Corn has made splendid progress throughout nearly the whole of the corn belt and is decidedly improved in the states of the Missouri valley, where its previous progress has been retarded by cool weather. While the general outlook for this crop is very promising, it has sustained some injury on lowland in Missouri and in portions of the south Atlantic and east gulf states, and is not in a good state of cultivation in portions of the Ohio valley.

Further reports of injury to harvested winter wheat are received from the central Mississippi and Ohio valleys, the middle Atlantic states, Texas and Oklahoma and Indian territory, but no complaints of the character are received from Kansas and Nebraska, both quality and yield in the last named state being better than expected. Harvesting where not finished in the more northerly districts is well advanced.

Spring wheat has experienced a week of favorable weather and continues in promising condition. While rust is still prevalent in the Dakotas and to some extent in Minnesota, it is not increasing in the first named states and there is very little in Minnesota. Spring wheat is filling nicely on the north Pacific coast, where the hot winds of the previous week caused but slight injury. Rust is increasing in Washington.

Rain Has Hurt Oats.

In the central Mississippi and Ohio valleys and in portions of the middle Atlantic states the oats harvest has been interrupted and considerable damage to both harvested and standing oats has resulted from wet weather. Harvesting is largely finished, except in the more northerly districts, where good yields are promised.

While too rapid growth of cotton and light fruiting are very generally reported throughout the cotton belt, an improvement is indicated in many districts. The crop continues to suffer from lack of cultivation, especially in the central and western portions of the belt, where, however, the weather of the last week has been favorable for cleaning the fields; a work which has been pushed vigorously. In Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas reports of abandoned fields continue. Damage by boll-weevils in Texas generally is not great, though considerable in localities.

Tobacco Has Suffered.

Too much rain caused injury to tobacco in Kentucky, Virginia and Maryland, where the crop has suffered from lack of cultivation, but notwithstanding these conditions the outlook in Kentucky is promising. A marked improvement is noted in Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York and the crop is doing well in New England, Indiana and Wisconsin. Curing is progressing in the Carolinas, where the yield is below the average.

Much hay has been damaged in the central Mississippi and Ohio valleys and middle Atlantic states, but in New England and the Missouri and Mississippi valleys haying has progressed under favorable conditions.

Nearly all reports indicate an inferior apple crop.

Alexander Melville Bell, father of Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the Bell telephone, is reported seriously ill at his home at Colonial Beach, Virginia. His illness is ascribed to advanced age.

This is the only construction I have been able to find, which determined the relation of a farmer who sells his produce to a statute or ordinance regulating peddling, and which are not peddlers. I accept that interpretation of the law and hold that a farmer selling the products of his soil either in wholesale lots or at retail is not a peddler.

"In reply to your remark about peddlers taking out licenses until this question has been determined in court, I will say that I believe this act to be constitutional."

...Forty Years Ago...

Jansville Daily Gazette, Wednesday, July 19, 1865.—The Temperance Meeting Last Evening.—The temperance meeting in the Court Room last evening was even more largely attended than the one held a week previously. It is evident that the citizens are getting awakened to the enormous evils to the community, resulting from the present indiscriminate sale of intoxicating liquors. The speeches were plain and to the point, and received evidently with great satisfaction.

The State Fair at Jansville.—It has been definitely decided to hold the State Agricultural Fair in this city the coming fall. As this is the second year in succession of the Fair in this point, we have no doubt that the citizens of the county will show their appreciation of the distinction by helping to make up an exhibition in every way creditable to the State. There is abundant time to commence preparations for the event and we trust our people will take such an interest in the Fair as will manifest most conclusively that we live in a section unsurpassed in the West for its adaptation to agricultural pursuits.

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet Thursday, the 20th inst., at 3 o'clock p. m. at their rooms, when they will consider the propriety of disbanding. Copies of forms used to obtain soldiers' dues of the Government have been forwarded to us by the Sanitary Commission at Washington, and the society will consider the subject of opening an office in our city where claims can be negotiated with the Government without expense to the soldier.

All members with the Advisory Committee, are requested to be present.

MRS. J. T. WRIGHT, President.

Jansville, July 19th, 1865.

FASHION NOTES

The bretelle, or suspender suits, because of their extremely youthful effect, are worn most successfully by girls just this side of the debutante age, and there is no end to the design of these frocks. The suspenders range from the narrowest strips to wide effects that almost take on the proportions of a fishu. One great advantage of these little details is the elegant way in which they set off the handsome linen and lace blouses worn under them.

A pretty design is shown in rather light blue taffeta made with the skirt plaited in groups of three. There is a blouse of all-over embroidery over which are "stretched" silk straps shirred in the center and finished on either side with the narrowest knife plaitings of the silk. The full sleeves of the blouse are gathered in a deep cuff at the elbow, with a ruffle of embroidery running around the arm where the puffs and cuffs meet.

Another attractive bretelle suit, also made of taffeta, but of the chiffon variety has pale green mingled with very faint designs of grey. The skirt is plaited, as most of the smart skirts are, and trimmed with puffed bands of the taffeta put on in a garland pattern. The plait is stitched almost flat to the knees, then released to effect a decided flare around the bottom.

The blouse of sheer white linen is cut heart-shaped at the neck and filled in with one of the smartest chemisettes imaginable, made of hand-embroidery. The suspenders are broad straps reaching over the shoulders, front and back perfectly plain, until a few inches above the deep girdle, where they are slashed just like man's, but with the masculine touch destroyed by an effective trimming of tiny pearl buttons sewn on the silk.

Young folks as well as old have this year had their quota of smart frocks and trills designed especially for their delectation. There are but few of the bretelle suits but that can be copied in the very inexpensive materials and in no fabric are they more effective than chambray.

This same material, by the way, is used for a gown for a smaller girl to very good purpose. The chambray is very pale blue and the frock has a yoke of fine embroidery, decorated on each side with rings formed with fine leather stitching. Pearl buttons may be substituted for the leather stitching, to save time and expense. The skirt is gathered at the top and at the bottom there are three deep tucks placed about an inch apart.

For cool days which one is always sure to find in the country grey and white coats of light weight woolen materials are useful and these are shown in novel designs for young ladies and misses. Red and blue coats are also shown in the ultra-modern shops and the former are especially fetching with some of the all-red costumes which young girls wear wonderfully well. White linen coats have collars and cuffs of cloth and velvet and vice versa.

Blue frocks of the cadet, marine and navy shades are considered very correct worn with stockings and Oxford ties of tan. They certainly suggest comfort in a very pleasing manner and are always neat. The exaggerated laces and bows which some young women effect in their footgear are frowned upon by those of refined tastes, for the idea of the well-dressed woman is to be attractive without being conspicuous. Nothing escapes the eye of the caricaturist who is frequently as eagerly in search of ideas for his art as the couturiere is for her, and the overdone styles of the head and feet of the summer girl have afforded him subjects for some very clever work.

White linen coats decorated with eyeletted embroidery are considered rather maroon for young girls, the trimming makes very effective collars and garter cuffs. It is also used sometimes as a border for the fronts of coats. The same is true of broderie Anglaise in more expensive materials. Embroidery is of paramount importance in the embellishment of young folks' fashions, but the more delicate the patterns, the better.

"HEARSAY" PROOF MAY CONVICT

Supreme Court of Mississippi Holds It Is Sometimes Good.

Jackson, Miss., July 19.—Hearsay evidence may be admitted in criminal cases, according to a supreme court decision, if it directly quotes the party charged. James Denmore and Willie Wallace, boys, were convicted of an attempted assault, partly on the evidence of a lawyer who heard them quarrel after arrest and accusing each other of the crime. The defense objected to the admission of the testimony, and carried the point to the supreme court. Chief Justice Truly read a decision holding the evidence properly admitted.

Going to See Eclipse.

Washington, July 19.—The United States auxiliary cruiser Dixie, having on board the instruments and materials for the observation station to be erected at Bona, Algeria, for the use of the American astronomers, who are to observe the eclipse of the sun at Bona, Aug. 25, sailed from Gibraltar for that port.

Negro Slayers Are Hanged.

Memphis, Tenn., July 19.—Toots Taylor, A. M. Miles and Major Mills, three negro murderers, were hanged in the courtyard of the Shelby county jail. Taylor murdered Sam Gaines in Memphis in August, 1904; wife murder was the crime which cost Miles his life, and Mills murdered his father-in-law.

Crew May All Have Plague.

New York, July 19.—The British steamer Indranti, detained at quarantine for examination for symptoms of bubonic plague among the crew, was allowed to dock under her own officers and a new crew. The regular crew, comprising forty-eight Chinamen and lascars, was taken to Hoffman's island.

HER LITTLE BATHING SUIT.

The small child takes the greatest delight in her bathing suit, and there is a marked preference shown for bright colors in such summer. Several shades of red are among the best liked. A somewhat dark tone of red material is used for the one pictured, just a white linen braid being used for trimming purposes. The blouse and bloomers are fashioned in one, and the skirt attached with buttons and buttonholes at the waist. The neck is open, and the broad sailor collar follows a V line at the throat. Just a little puff does duty for the sleeves; and this year the small child is absolved from the wearing of shoes and stockings while on the beach or in the water.

"What would did ever heal but by degrees?" If your business has been crippled by poor advertising, or by none at all, do not expect it to recover in a day.

GOVERNMENT AND BUSINESS.

In any comparison which can be instituted between government administration and the administration of business as conducted by corporations, is there any advantage to be found in either one or the other? This question is naturally suggested by the recent scandals in the government service and in the conduct of the great corporations.

Some months ago the whole country was shocked by the disclosures of corruption and maladministration in the postoffice department. This is a branch of the national government which is purely a matter of plain business. If there is any department of the public service which more than another should be free from political pull and graft, it is this. It was found, however, that the grossest abuses had entered into the postoffice administration. Even now as a result of the disclosures a judge of the supreme court of the state is on trial before the legislature, one of the charges being connected with the facts which the investigation revealed. At the present time the country is amazed by the scandal which has developed in the agricultural department, and confidence in the crop reports has been shaken by the revelations of dishonesty in their preparation.

But, on the other side the administration of business by corporations has not made a record which is in any degree better than that of the government administration. Far worse than the postoffice scandal and the crop bureau scandal have been the stippling scandal and the Equitable scandal, which are the result solely of business administration.

The significance of this becomes plain when it is taken into consideration that an increasing body of people, some of them men of culture and character, are advocating not only government ownership of railroads, telegraphs, gas, electric light, and other public utilities, but even an advanced socialism such as would be involved in the taking over by the government of the great industries of the country. Among the strongest arguments against such a policy as this is the claim that the government cannot carry on business with the same efficiency and honesty that can be shown in independent administration. We believe this argument to be sound, but, nevertheless, it must be admitted that during the past four or five years business administration by corporations has been attended with as many scandals as government administration has.

In this connection attention should be called to the fact that apparently government supervision of corporations has failed, in part, at least, to prevent maladministration of the corporations subject to this supervision. For instance, bank examinations both by the federal government and the state government have not prevented some bad failures, due to some very respectable and criminal proceedings, on the part of bank officials. Moreover, the conditions which have been recently disclosed in the Equitable have been a development of years, and yet during all that time the Equitable has been subject to the supervision of the insurance departments of the different states. It is a fair inquiry why it is that state supervision failed long ago to reveal the true condition of things in this corporation. It is certain that for years there has been a well defined suspicion among well informed people that there was a screw loose somewhere in the Equitable organization, and that things were going on there that were wrong. Many times has it been hinted that an investigation of the Equitable would reveal a shocking condition of affairs. It is scarcely possible that the insurance department at Albany was unaware of this, and yet its examinations never resulted in disclosing the facts, and it was not until the directors of the Equitable fell to quarreling among themselves that the truth became known.

It all amounts to this, that nothing is more difficult in this world than to find people who serve faithfully and honestly as trustees for the people, whether in political or in financial positions. Both the government and the corporations have to be conducted by persons who represent the public. The President, the cabinet, the thousands of officials, the members of congress and the judges, are all trustees for the people in the administration of what we call public affairs. The president, directors and other officials of the corporations are the trustees of the people in the conduct of what we call business. In both classes of trustees the first essential qualification is honesty; and after all that is said, that remains now, as in the past, the one thing that is most difficult to obtain. It is true that the grosser forms of dishonesty are rarer now than power. There is not so much direct stealing, but there is more of the finer and more subtle forms of corruption, the exploiting of public business for private gain by methods which are summed up in the word "graft."

HOW TO SELL GOODS.

(From the Philadelphia Record.)
In an address delivered before the Pacific Coast Advertising Men's Association the manager of a San Francisco department store said that "there are two things necessary in order to get results from advertising—first, have a good thing to sell, and then talk about it in a way that will make people want to buy it."

The speaker overlooked a third essential of which every advertising man is cognizant. The good thing must be invitingly described where the description will be read. The most alluring "ad" ever written is of small value in a waste paper basket.

The department store manager should have said: "Have a good thing to sell, talk about it in a way that will make people want to buy it, and do your talking through a daily newspaper of high standing and large circulation."

Boom Janesville all you can. Remember this is the best city in southern Wisconsin at all times and do not let any one tell you anything different.

If you cannot boost the project to make Janesville the leading city of southern Wisconsin do not knock the project. If your business is so large you cannot handle it alone why hire more clerks and help the town to grow.

Janesville has awakened from its twenty-year sleep and from now on push and vim are to be the leading factors.

Even Lieutenant Governors can travel in pretty fast company if the engineer tries to make time.

Peary has gone to seek the North Pole. Anyway he will be cool these hot days.

Elihu Root will not miss his business career when he gets back into the cabinet harness.

PRESS COMMENT.

Exchange: Peary is on his way to the north pole. Can you blame him?

Oshkosh Northwestern: The "good old summer time" seems to have come "all in a bunch."

Milwaukee Herald: Undoubtedly Tom Lawson and Miss Tarbell are not intentionally inciting some crank to assassinate Rockefeller.

Chicago Record-Herald: Let us hope the people of Paris will not discover any of Paul Jones' old debts and want us to take them over.

Racine Journal: Kenosha is now claiming a population of over 20,000. It is certain that she will make every effort to show up that number.

Exchange: James J. Hill says a business boom is approaching. Mr. Hill must be long now on a few things that he would be pleased to see advance.

Sheboygan Journal: Fifty miles of corn has been destroyed in Iowa. But there are fifty miles of speculators in Chicago ready to fill the gap by boosting the price.

El Paso Herald: Colombia has put up the bars in the effort to prevent the migration of laborers to Panama in search of jobs. She is determined not to get any good out of that canal.

Marquette Eagle-Star: Colonel Henry Watterson has discovered another striking similarity between President Roosevelt and Emperor William. He says either could earn his living in case he lost his present job.

Menasha Record: Have you noticed that every one of these reformers who are busy decrying wealth are keeping their eye on a fat salary, sometimes on two, and their hand on a fat pursed friend who is "easy"?

Merrill Advocate: A Chicago paper says that doctors now prescribe automobiles for people's health. That's a prescription we're afraid we couldn't get filled.

Marion Advertiser: Wisconsin has got an anti-cigarette law which should be accompanied by a prohibitory padding practice by women. Padding is the direct cause for many divorces, the plaintiff asserting that he had married cotton batting and a few bones instead of a woman.

Fond du Lac Commonwealth: Shenandoah, Iowa and Freeport, Illinois are engaged in a spirited contest to determine which is really the present home of William A. Rockefeller, the father of the Standard Oil magnate. The race, however, is free for all, and other towns are entitled to enter.

Fennimore Times: In a patent medicine almanac we find the following weather forecast for July: "15th to 18th, want of rain fell all over Minnesota, Wisconsin, New York and New England." Yes, we ought to have some rain soon; these little showers have been only an aggravation.

Madison Journal: And why Col. Vilas retires from the university control is one of those things that people may only speculate about. Stars of first magnitude decorate the azure of the La Pollette administration with spluttering difficulty and their glory is but transitory.

Superior Telegram: Without doubt a fool in a crowd can create more trouble than a thousand men can cure. On Wednesday night at London, Ontario, an American flag was torn down from the front of the city hall and trampled under feet, because an American visitor to the Orangemen's meeting exclaimed: "No hell with Canada; she never showed us yet!" The flag was then scattered on the streets and the pieces scattered on the Port Huron (Mich.) delegation, and the members of this body did not in any way resent the insult, giving us their excuse the statement that they affront to Canada was uncalled for.

Exchange: The city of New Orleans has undertaken to build and operate as a municipal work, a railroad, which in its twenty miles of length will encircle New Orleans, connecting all lines of railway and all docks and wharves, rendering the handling of that city's growing commerce a simpler and more economical problem than ever before. The first spike was driven on July 1, and the speakers on that occasion all spoke hopefully and confidently of the great benefits to accrue to New Orleans trade and industry from the working of this railroad, which is looked upon as likely to cheapen the cost of handling of freight, open large areas of waste land to settlement, and attract great numbers of manufacturing enterprises to the city.

Rockford Register-Gazette: The war of railroads between the Gulf lines and those connecting with the east has broken out again with spirit. This time it is with a tendency to remove the permanent currents of traffic. The Illinois Central has gained a permanent foothold in the traffic with the crops, especially corn and Central America, and now promises to extend its field by adding a lake fleet and delivering coffee and sugar to the states of the lake basin, direct from the gulf in place of the former route by way of New York. New York is no longer the whole country in these specialties. The foreshadows what may be expected when the channels passing through the Panama canal are once established.

La Crosse Leader-Press: As many of the severely critical articles written by Miss Ida M. Tarbell and the inflammatory writings and speeches of Thomas W. Lawson, John D. Rockefeller is said now to be in somewhat the same condition as the czar of Russia—lord of all but not daring to enjoy it and covering in fear of assassination, behind strong walls and protected by armed guards. Mr. Rockefeller is not, of course, in as great danger as he thinks he is. In an ordinary body of citizens he would be in no danger of bodily violence and would not even be subjected to insult but it is not impossible that some crank, incited by Lawson utterances, may attack the oil king and the latter may be wise in deciding to take no chances. The case should cause serious reflection as to whether the Rockefeller game is worth the candle. Two hundreds of thousands of merely well-to-do Americans, who have sufficient for all their needs and are at the same time enjoying to the full the better wealth of health and happiness, are getting more out of life than this man of many hundred millions, who dares not to venture into the sunlight nor to mingle with his fellow men.

Dogs on the Battlefield.
It is not unreasonable to hope that in time wealthy dog owners and militia ambulance companies may take up the training of dogs to search for and carry aid to the wounded on the battlefield.—In Scribner's Magazine.

Plans for the new residence to be built on South Jackson street for T. E. Bennison have been out for the past week and were opened today. The drawings call for a two-story frame construction with cement porches and foundation.

In the office of Architect Hilton are now being drawn plans for the remodeling of a brick building on North Hickory street, belonging to John Sweeney. The structure will be converted into two flats.

Work on the new McVear building and remodeling of the Helms block on South Main street has progressed rapidly and the laying of brick on the front has been completed and the cornice placed. The buildings, it is expected, will be finished within two months.

The vast work of constructing the New Central Methodist church edifice at the corner of Pleasant and South Franklin streets has been well started. The excavation was completed about a week ago and the laying of the foundation has been commenced. Local contractors say that the building cannot be finished before next spring.

A number of contractors are now figuring on the new C. H. Spence residence to be built in Evansville. The plans have been out for several days and bids will be opened before long. The dwelling will be 32x35, entirely of hollow concrete blocks.

Plans for the Whitford Memorial Hall at Milton are now out and several builders in this city are figuring on the work. The drawings were made by a New York architect, who belongs to the Seventh-Day Adventist Church and donated. The structure will be 32x30 of brick construction with stone trimmings. The plans are for a science hall and the laboratories for the various scientific studies in the Curriculum of Milton college will be located in the building.

KICKERS' KOLUM

To the Editor of the Kickers' Kolum: It would be a great convenience to the different liverymen about the city if those borrowing rigs for moonlight evening drives would be a little particular about collecting all their possessions before returning the rig to the livery. Notwithstanding the fact that several recent discoveries have proved very amusing—as for instance, a young man having just returned in the livery from his drive, pays his bill and is about to leave when he is called back by one of the employees, who, when looking over the rig, hailed to light a monstrous chicken affair evidently belonging to the military department, nevertheless it is quite inconvenient to have to hitch up at midnight and return such delicate burdens when the indignant owners telephone for the recovery of their property. Liverymen don't enjoy big hats any more than clergymen do. "AN UNLOOKER."

Editor Kickers' Kolum: I am no kicker, but I want to be informed whether the city laws are to be obeyed. Now, the order comes to trim shade trees. Is it to be obeyed? Why one law and not another? My trees will not have a branch cut till I find out if the law to keep bicycles off the walks is to be enforced. Quite a number besides myself have complained to the mayor, but it has done no good. I live on a busy street on which the wheels constantly roll boards needing to be nailed down. Is there any way to keep the walks safe from the trouble and expense? "INFORMATION WANTED."

BLAME THE SUN SPOT FOR THIS HOT WAVE

Janesville's weather friend, Ira Hicks, announces the sun has spots and that this causes the hot wave. Weather prophet, George Appleby, has not been consulted on this theory, but he would probably agree. In fact the spots on the sun can be seen with the aid of a smoked glass. Just as the "sun goes down" it resembles a huge hole in the orb of light as though some one had shot a hole through it. Mr. Hicks says: "A gigantic double spot has appeared on the face of the sun. It will be visible through smoked glasses for six days and possibly longer. Local weather and temperature conditions may be affected and the conditions resulting from the sun spot have caused the extreme heat on both sides of the North American continent. The sun spot now visible is one of the three largest on record. When I first saw the huge depression in the sun's surface it was on what we call the east limb of the sun. It is moving westward over the sun's surface. The sun is 900,000 miles in diameter. This double spot is about 175,000 miles in area and you can see just how big it is."

A 12 PER CENT. INVESTMENT

We are offering for sale 25000 shares treasury stock of the

Sibley Oil Company

At 50 Cents Per Share, Par Value $1.00.

This stock now pays dividends of 1 per cent. every second month, or 12 per cent. on the investment. The reason for the offer is to further develop the property of the Sibley Oil Co., which consists of 560 acres of proven oil territory in Jay and Wells Counties, Indiana, and within two miles of the property from which J. M. Bostwick, D. W. Kimball and La Fayette McWilliams have received large dividends.

11 WELLS IN OPERATION

The Sibley Company have 11 wells in operation, which produce oil to the amount of about $1200 per month, and it is the desire of the company to drill 7 additional wells, which will in all probability double the production of oil.

There will be no expense connected with the additional wells as the property is thoroughly equipped with engines, towers, tanks, power houses, pumpers' houses, etc. The power installed at the present time is capable of pumping 20 additional wells; the Sibley Company propose only 7 new wells at present.

ROOM FOR 90 WELLS.

The 560 acres belonging to the company is a unique block in that it is proven oil territory in a remarkably rich belt and also that it is the largest block in that field. Tested acreage is very scarce. There is room for 90 wells in the tract.

EVERY SHARE SOLD FOR 50c. None of the 80000 shares sold thus far have gone for other than cash—none for promotion purposes. No salaries are paid to any stockholders or officers of the company with the exception of the Field Manager who lives on the property of the company and devotes his entire time to its affairs. The 25000 of treasury stock now offered is to be used as before stated, for the drilling of additional wells. This leaves 95000 shares still in the treasury where it will remain unless further development is considered.

Earn 1 Per Cent a Month—With the 7 new wells the dividends should amount to 1 per cent a month or 24 per cent on the investment. Only 25000 shares will be sold at 50c per share. A big opportunity to secure a present dividend payer with an excellent chance of its becoming a wealth maker shortly. Address, call or telephone

SPURIOUS PAPER PASSED IN CITY

SMITH'S HOTEL AND BUGGS' GROCERY VICTIMIZED

FOR TWENTY DOLLARS EACH

Checks Were Made Out in Favor of One Robert Reinhardt And Signed by Kemmerer & Co.

Two forged checks for $20 each, purporting to be made out in favor of one Robert Reinhardt, by C. W. Kemmerer & Co., were successfully passed in Janesville on Saturday. The concerns victimized were Louis J. Buggs' grocery at 410 Western avenue and Smith's Hotel at 12 North Academy street. At the latter place one of these spurious checks was tendered Manager Teubert in payment for a four-gallon jug of whisky and some tobacco. He returned change amounting to some $16. The stranger who had procured the check explained that he had sold Kemmerer & Co. a horse and had received in payment $100 in cash and the $20 check. This sounded plausible and no investigation was made. Subsequently Mr. Reinhardt departed, neglecting to take the whisky he had purchased with him. At the Buggs' grocery a man answering the same general description offered the same kind of a check and story and had change amounting to about $18 returned to him after he had purchased "some groceries."

Kemmerer & Co. bank with the First National. Both checks were drawn on the Merchants & Mechanics bank. This, of course, was not known to the parties who accepted the paper. The management of Smith's hotel tendered the check they had accepted to Grindley & Craft, milk dealers. When Mrs. Grindley and Mr. Buggs appeared at the Merchants & Mechanics bank with the two forged instruments they were told that Kemmerer & Co. did not bank there and referred to the First National. When the teller at the latter institution glanced at the signatures he at once announced that they were forged. The possessors of the checks then went to the office of the suspected makers and had their worst suspicions confirmed. No attempt had been made to imitate in the faintest degree the handwriting of the signature. Between Saturday and Tuesday when the frauds were both discovered the forger undoubtedly took advantage of a generous allotment of time to get himself hence. No good description of the man could be furnished at either place where he "transacted business."

ART LEAGUE PLANS DELIGHTFUL OUTING

On Friday the Janesville Art League will hold their annual picnic up the Rock river at Mrs. Searle's cottage. The steamer Idlewild will take the party to their destination, leaving her dock at ten o'clock and returning about seven. The committee in charge of the arrangements are Mrs. Lobbell and Mrs. Walter Helms.

CURRENT NEWS NOTES.

Landed Large Carp: While fishing with a small bamboo pole and light line on the rear of F. F. Peterson's store in North Main street yesterday, Ord. Baker of Koshkonong wolf fame landed an immense carp. Though the fish was twenty-five inches long and probably fifteen or eighteen in circumference it halved the scales at but nine and a half pounds.

Many Floral Tributes: Though Arthur Smith, the unfortunate Chicago young man who was drowned in Rock River Monday, had been in Janesville but a day he had formed many warm friendships, and when his body was shipped to Chicago yesterday afternoon numerous floral offerings were placed on the casket box. Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Davey, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Dunwiddie and Miss Hummel expressed their sympathy by a wreath of white roses. The body was accompanied to Chicago by D. D. Davey.

Civil Case Tried: The taking of testimony in the civil action of Smith vs. Gratzinger was concluded in municipal court this morning and taken under advisement. The defendant admits a debt of $29.85 to the plaintiff but claims that it cannot be collected owing to the fact that he was a minor when it was contracted. The case was decided against him in justice court at Evansville and an appeal was taken. Atty. Mount appears for the plaintiff and Atty. Bates of Beloit for the defendant.

Hasten to La Crosse: Orion Sutherland and Al Schaller were entered by telegraph in the state championship tourney on the golf links at La Crosse and departed this morning for the scene of the contest.

Fine Time at Links: A delightful time was enjoyed at the golf links yesterday by a large number of players. No regular contest was held owing to the fact that the handicapping of the players had been overlooked and their records were not available. Thirty-four took supper at the pavilion and a large number went out in the evening to participate in the informal dance.

A Social Gathering: Tomorrow evening in the prayer meeting rooms of the Congregational church there will be a social gathering for those who have united with the church this year. The meeting will open with a short devotional service and the rest of the hour be given to fellowship.

Prof. Arbuthnot Happy: A baby boy arrived at the home of Prof. John Arbuthnot, 107 North Bluff street, yesterday afternoon.

BY LAUNCH TO FORT ATKINSON AND BACK

L. L. Leffingwell and Robert Hockett on Two Days' Pleasure Ride on Rock River.

L. L. Leffingwell and Robert Hockett left this morning in the former's launch for Fort Atkinson. They intend to take two days for their pleasure trip, expecting to reach their destination this evening and after spending the night there return tomorrow. The course is on the waters of Rock River and Lake Koshkonong. Their boat will be the third one to go around the Indian Ford dam, the launch "Laura," belonging to George McKee, and F. F. Peterson's launch having passed the obstacle by means of the new boat ferry last week. It is very probable now that a way of going beyond the dam, which has formerly obstructed launch-navigation between Janesville and Koshkonong, has been found that pleasure trips between here and places on the Lake and in the river farther up will become popular and launches from Janesville will be plying the waters above each day of the season.

REHEARSE FOR ST. PAUL SAENGERFEST

Janesville Concordia Society Expects to Send Chorus to Great Gathering Next Year.

Monday night at Electric Park a rehearsal was held and though not a large part of the membership was present the meetings will be continued and a chorus will soon be organized to rehearse regularly.

NEW CEMENT POST FACTORY ASSURED

Platteville Men Purchased an Acre of Land for the Site This Morning.

This morning a conveyance was executed transferring to John Roberts, his son, Victor E. of Platteville, and Atty. Alfred Rogers and Madison an acre of land near the site of the present Janesville Cement Post Co.'s factory. On this site the Messrs. Rogers will erect the cement post factory which they have decided to remove from Platteville, both on account of the extra fine quality of sand to be obtained here and the superior railroad facilities available. The concern locates here without asking for a bonus of any kind. From ten to fifteen men will be employed at the outset and all but one, an expert machinist, will be secured in Janesville. The building will be erected and the special machinery installed very soon. The concern has been operating successfully in Platteville for three years and it is expected that a much larger measure of prosperity will be enjoyed in this city. The Messrs. John and Victor Rogers will come to make their permanent home in Janesville. Ultimately the Janesville Cement Post factory may be taken over, but this is a matter for the future to determine. The new name of the concern that is to be removed from Platteville has not yet been determined upon.

JUDGE RALPH ADAIR MAKES DECIDED HIT

Former Janesville Resident the Pre-siding Judge at the Famous Funston Trial.

Judge Adair of Iowa, Kansas, whose name has been given great prominence in the newspapers the country over during the past week owing to the sensational trial just completed of General Frederick Funston's father for carrying concealed weapons and committing assault and battery, is none other than Ralph Adair, a former resident of Janesville. Judge Adair went to Iowa some two years ago and was elected judge of the police court there this spring. He is a son of Mrs. Nellie Butts of 160 Milton avenue. Judge Adair visited Janesville this last winter for some time and then returned to Iowa, where he has come into international fame. The Funston trial came about through the dynamiting of grangers and the temperance crusade and Mr. Funston, who is an ex-congressman and very prominent in Iowa, was arrested the next morning for his actions and was found to be carrying concealed weapons and resisting an officer. Owing to the prominence of the defendant great interest was shown in the trial and Judge Adair's office being too small the opera-house was rented and the trial held there. Judge Adair found the defendant guilty of two of the charges brought and sentenced him to pay five dollars and costs for each offense.

VETERANSS WILL BE OUT IN FULL FORCE

Tomorrow's Picnic is Exciting Considerable Interest Among the Old Soldiers.

Tomorrow promises to be a big day for the local members of the G. A. R. The annual picnic of the Rockford Beloit and Janesville posts will be held at Hot Springs, Minn. The first car on which the majority of the Janesville party will go will leave at 8:15 and arrive at the park at 9:15. After that, cars will be run on the half hour schedule all day. Colonel Lawler of Rockford is marshal of the day and Philip Cheek of Baraboo, the orator of the day. The Rockford drum corps and the Rockford Lobster quartette will furnish music. The arrangements for the Janesville end of the day's event has been left in the hands of Messrs. Harlow, Kimbley and Bear. It is expected that delegates of old soldiers from Milton, Sharon and Clinton will join the day's festivities.

HOT WEATHER BRINGS OUT MANY RECIPES

Hot weather brings out lots of advice as how to keep cool. The following may be useful to Janesville people who suffer during the nights from the oppressive heat. The last thing before retiring, go to your bathroom and take a plunge bath. Having the water as cold as can be borne without a shock to the system. Use no friction; it excites the circulation and increases the heat. On emerging from the bath put on your night robe without drying the body in the least. Get into bed at once and you will find yourself cool and comfortable and will drop to sleep immediately and sleep well all night. One might think the sensation of going to bed in a damp night robe would be disagreeable. On the contrary, the sensation is most delicious. Only enough water clings to the body to slightly moisten the night robe and the vaporizing process which ensues cools the whole system and invites sleep at once.

OLD SORES ROOTED IN THE BLOOD

Old Sores are the result of a deeply polluted, foul blood supply. The blood is filled with poisons, and as it finds an outlet through the skin, the surrounding parts become diseased and the sore cuts deeper into the tissues and flesh and becomes a permanent trouble.

Some years ago while at work, I fell over a truck and severely injured both arms and legs. My blood became poisoned as a result, and the doctor told me I would have running sores for life, and that if they were closed up the result would be fatal. Under this discouraging report I left off their treatment and resorted to the use of S. S. S. Its effects were prompt and gratifying. It took only a short while for the medicine to entirely cure the sores, and I am now dead as the doctors intimated. I would be, neither have the sores ever broken out again, and some twelve years have elapsed since what I have described occurred. Having been so signally benefited by its use I can heartily recommend it as the one great blood purifier.

Wholesaler, W. V. J. W. FUNDIS, Care Schmalzback Brothers Co.

Salves, powders, plasters, etc., do no good, and the surgeon gets disgusted and often despairs of curing an old sore. The trouble is in the blood and until the poisonous matter that is keeping up the ulcer is driven out the place cannot heal. S. S. S. reaches these old sores through the blood by removing every particle of poison or impurity from the circulation and building up the system. It makes the blood healthy so that as it circulates to the diseased parts the tissues are strengthened and the sore can heal naturally and permanently. If you have an old sore or ulcer do not waste time with salves, powders, plasters, etc., but write for our book and ask for any medical advice you wish. We make no charge for either.

IN THE BISHOP'S CARRIAGE

By MIRIAM MICHELSON

(Copyright, 1934, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

W HEN Obermuller sent for me I thought he wanted to see me about that play he's writing in which I'm to star—when the pigs begin to fly.

Funnest thing in the world about that man, Mag. He knows he can't get bookings for any play on earth; that if he did they'd be canceled and any old excuse thrown at him, as soon as Tausig heard of it and could put on the screws. He knows that there isn't an unwatched hole in theatrical America through which he can crawl and pull me and the play in after him. And yet he just can't let go working on it. He loves it, Mag; he loves it as Molly loved that child of hers that kept her nursing it all the years of its life, and left her feeling that the world had been robbed of everything there was for a woman to do when it died.

Obermuller has told me all the plot. In fact, he's worked it out on me. I know it as it is, as he wanted it to be, and as it's going to be. He tells me he's built it up about me; that it will fit me as never a comedy fitted a player—yet, and that we'll make such a hit—the play and I together—that . . .

And then he remembers that there's no chance; not the ghost of one; and he falls to swearing at the Trust.

"Don't you think, Mr. O.," I said, as he began again when I came into his office, "that it might be as well to quit cursing the syndicate till you've got something new to say or something different to rail about? It seems to me a man's likely to get daffy if he keeps harping on—"

"Oh, I've got it all right. Nance, be sure of that! I've got something different to say to them and something new to swear about. They've done me up; that's all. Just as they've fixed Iringer and Gaffney and Howison."

"THEY'DONE ME UP."

"Tell me."

He threw out his arms and then let them fall to his side.

"Oh, it's easy," he cried, "so easy that I never thought of it. They've just bought the Vaudeville out of hand and served notice on me that when my lease expires next month they'll not be able to renew it, 'unfortunately.' That's all. No; not quite. In order to kill all hope of a new plan in me they've just let it go to be understood that any man or woman that works for Obermuller needn't come round to them at any future time."

"Phew! A blacklist."

"Not anything so tangible. It's just a hint, you know, but it works all right. It works like—"

"What are you going to do; what can you do?"

"Shoot Tausig or myself, or both of us."

"Nonsense!"

"Yes, of course, it's nonsense, or rather it's only what I'd like to do."

But that's not the question.

Never mind about me. It's what are you going to do?"

He looked straight at me, waiting. But I didn't answer. I was thinking.

"You don't realize, Nance, what those fellows are capable of. When Gaffney told me, before he gave up and went west, that there was a genuine signed conspiracy among them to crush out us independents, I laughed at him. It's a dream, Gaffney, I said. 'Forget it.' It's no dream, as you'll find out when your turn comes in time," he shouted. "It's a fact, and what's more Iringer once taxed Tausig to his face with it; told him he knew there was such a document in existence, signed by the great Tausig himself, by Heffelfinger, of the Pacific circuit; by Dixon, of Chicago, and Weinstein, of New Orleans, binding themselves to force us fellows to the wall, and specifying the per cent of profit each one of 'em should get on any increase of business; that blacklist every man and woman that worked for us; to buy up our debts and even bring false attachments, when—"

"Now, weren't there enough real debts to satisfy 'em? They're hard to please, if you haven't creditors enough to suit 'em!"

He looked grim, but he didn't speak. "I don't believe it, anyway," Mr. O. said. "Isn't good for you to keep thinking about just one thing. You'll find where Iringer did, if you don't look out. How did he know about it, anyway?"

"There was a leak in Tausig's office, Iringer used to be in with them, and he had it from a clerk who—but never mind that. It's the blacklisting I'm talking about now. Gray's just been in to see me, to let me know that she quits at the end of the season. And his Lordship, too, of course. You're not burdened with a contract, Nance. Perhaps you'd better think it over seriously for a day or two and decide if it wouldn't be best—"

"I don't have to," I interrupted then.

"Nance!" he cried, jumping up, as though he'd been relieved of half his troubles.

"I don't have to think it over," I went on slowly, not looking at him, but holding out to me. "It doesn't take long to know that when you're between the devil and the deep sea, you'd better try the devil rather than be forced out into the wet."

"What?—you don't mean—"

"I knew he was looking at me incredulously, but I just wouldn't meet his eyes."

"My staying with you will do you no good—"

"I was hurrying now to get it over with—and it would do me a lot of harm. I think you're right, Mr. Obermuller; I'd better just go over to where it's warm. They'll be glad to get me and—and, to tell the truth, I'll be glad to get in with the syndicate, even if I can't make as good terms as I might have by selling that contract, which—like the famous conspiracy you're half mad about—never existed."

He sat down on the edge of the desk. I caught one glimpse of his face. It was black; that was enough for me. I turned to go.

"Ah, but it did, Miss Olden, it did!" he sneered.

"I won't believe it on the word of a man that's been in the lunatic asylum ever since he lost his theater."

"Perhaps you'll believe it on mine."

I jumped. "On yours?"

"Didn't that little bully, when he lost his temper that day at the Van Twiller, when we had our last fight—didn't he pull a paper out of his box and shake it in my face, and—"

"But—you could have them arrested for conspiracy and—"

"And the proof of it could be destroyed and then—but I can't see how this interests you."

"No—no," I said, thoughtfully. "I only happened to bump it in with the contract we haven't—you and I. And as there's no contract, why there's no need of my waiting till the end of the season."

"Do you mean to say you'd—you'd—"

"If I were done, I were better off'd be done quickly," I said, Machiavellianly.

He looked at me. Sitting there on his desk, his clenched fist on his knee, he looked for a moment as though he was about to fly at me. Then all of a sudden he slipped into his chair, leaned back and laughed.

It wasn't a pleasant laugh, Mag. No—wait. Let me tell you the rest.

"You are so shrewd, Olden, so awfully shrewd! Your eye is so everlastingly out for the main chance, and you're still so young that I predict a great future for you. I might even suggest that by cultivating Tausig personally—"

"You needn't."

"No, you're right; I needn't. You can discount any suggestion I might make. You just want to be the first to go over, eh? To get there before Gray does—to get all there is in it for the first rebel that lays down his arms; not to come in late when submission is stale—and cheap. Don't worry about terms, you poor little babe in the woods. Don't—"

His own words seemed to choke him. "Don't you think—" I began a bit unsteadily.

"I think—oh, what a fool I've been!" That stiffened me.

"Of course, you have," I said, cordially. "It's silly to fight the push, isn't it? It's only the cranks that get cocky and think they can upset the fellows on top. The thing to do is to find out which is the stronger—if you're a better man than the other fellow, down him. If he's the champion, enlist under him. But be in it. What's the use of being a kicker all your life? You only let some one else come in for the soft things, while you stay outside and gnaw your finger-nails and plot and plan and starve. You spend your life hoping to live to-morrow, while the Tausigs are living high to-day. The thing to do is to be humble if you can't be arrogant. If they've got you in the door, don't curse, but placate them. Think of Gaffney herding sheep out in Nevada; of Iringer in the asylum; of Howison—"

"Admirable! admirable!" he interrupted, sarcastically. "The only fault I have to find with your harangue is that you've misconceived my meaning entirely. But I needn't enlighten you. Good morning, Miss Olden—good-by."

He turned to his desk and pulled out some papers. I knew he wasn't so desperately absorbed in them as he pretended to be.

"Won't you shake hands," I asked, "and wish me luck?"

He put down his pen. His face was white and hard, but as he looked at me it gradually softened.

"I suppose—I suppose, I am a bit unreasonable just this minute," he said, slowly. "I'm hard hit and—and I don't just know the way out. Still, I haven't any right to—to expect more of you than there is in you, you poor little thing! It's not your fault, but mine, that I've expected—Oh, for God's sake—Nance—go, and leave me alone!"

I had to take that with me to the Van Twiller, and it wasn't pleasant. But Tausig received me with open arms.

"Got tired of staying out in the cold—eh?" he grinned.

"I'm tired of vaudeville," I answered. "Can't you give me a chance in a comedy?"

"Hm! Ambitious, ain't you?"

"Obermuller has a play all ready for me—written for me. He'd star me fast enough if he had the chance."

"But he'll never get the chance."

"Oh, I don't know."

"But I do. He's on the toboggan; that's where they all get, my dear, when they get big-headed enough to fight us."

"But Obermuller's not like the others. He's not so easy. And he is so clever; why, the plot of that comedy is the bulkiest thing—"

"You've read it—you remember it?"

"Oh, I know it by heart—my part of it. You see, he wouldn't keep away from me while he was thinking of it. He kept consulting me about everything in it. In a way, we worked over it together."

The little man looked at me, slowly closing one eye. It is a habit of his when he's going to do something particularly nasty.

"Then, in a way, as you say, it is part yours."

"Hardly! Imagine Nance Olden writing a line of a play!"

"Still you—collaborated; that's the word."

"I say, my dear, if I could read that comedy, and it was—half what you say it is, I might—I don't promise, mind—but I might let you have the part that was written for you and put the thing on. Has he drilled you any, eh? We was the best stage-manager we ever had before he got the notion of managing for himself—and ruining himself."

"Well, he's all that yet. Of course, he has told me, and we agreed how the thing should be done. As he'd write, you know, he'd read the thing over to me, and I—"

"Fine—fine! A reading from that fool Obermuller would be enough to open the eyes of a clever woman. I'd like to read that comedy—yes?"

"But Obermuller would never—"

"But Olden might—"

"What?"

"Dictate the plot to my secretary, Mason, in there," he nodded his head back toward the inner room. "She could give him the plot and as much of her own part in full as she could remember. You know Mason. Used to be a newspaper man. Smart fellow, that, when he's sober. He could piece out the holes—yes?"

I looked at him. The little beast sat there, slowly closing one eye and opening it again. He looked like an unhealthy little frog, with his bald head, his thin-lipped mouth that laughed, while the wrinkles rayed away from his cold, sneering eyes that had no smile in them.

"I—I wouldn't like to make an enemy of a man like Obermuller, Mr. Tausig."

"Bah! Ain't I told you he's on the toboggan?"

"But you never can tell with a man like that. Suppose he got into that combine with Heffelfinger and Dixon and Weinstein?"

"What're you talking about?"

"Well, it's what I've heard."

"But Heffelfinger and Dixon and Weinstein are all in with us; who told you that fairy story?"

"Obermuller himself."

The little fellow laughed. His is a creaky, almost silent little laugh; if a spider could laugh he'd laugh that way.

"They're fooling him a bunch or two. Never you mind Obermuller. He's a dead one."

"Oh, he said that you thought they were in with you, but that nothing but a written agreement would hold men like that. And that you hadn't got."

"Smart fellow, that Obermuller. He'd have been a good man to have in the business if it hadn't been for those independent ideas he's got. He's right; it takes—"

"So there is an agreement!" I shouted, in spite of myself, as I leaned forward.

He sat back in his chair, or rather, he let it swallow him again.

"What business is that of yours? Stick to the business on hand. Get to work on that play with Mason inside. It's good, and we decide to put it on, we'll pay you $500 down in addition to your salary. If it's rot, you'll have your salary weekly all the time you're at it, just the same as if you were working, till I can place you. In the meantime, keep your ears and eyes open and watch things, and your mouth shut. I'll speak to Mason and he'll be ready for you to-morrow morning. Come round in the morning; there's nobody about, then, and we want to keep this thing dark till it's done. Obermuller mustn't get any idea what we're up to. . . . He don't love you—no—for shaking him?"

"He's furious; wouldn't even say good-by. I'm done for with him, anyway, I guess. But what could I do?"

"Nothing, my dear; nothing. You're a smart little girl," he chuckled. "Ta-ta!"

PRAYER FOR HAY.

At Lunch In Forest President Asked God's Mercy For Late Secretary.

The Chicago Tribune recently printed the following anecdote:

"Ten miles from any city, with the members of his cabinet and the silent trees of the forest as the only witnesses, Wednesday afternoon (July 5) Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States, on his benighted knees prayed for the spiritual welfare of John Hay, the late secretary of state, who was buried at Cleveland."

"The president's train left Cleveland shortly after noon Wednesday (July 5), and owing to the great hurry the party did not have time to get anything at midday. At Wheelock's switch, ten miles south of Cleveland, the train had to lay over some minutes, and President Roosevelt asked for luncheon on the grass. Part of the forest had been cleared, and there the cloth was laid. Then the members of the party, sitting on the grass, grouped themselves about the cloth."

"President Roosevelt then arose to a kneeling position and asked the Almighty for his blessing on the feast. He spoke simply of the great friendship that existed between himself and John Hay, and finally he asked God's mercy for John Hay, as men were all sinners, although John Hay was among the least of these."

"The food was then eaten, and the trip to Pittsburg continued."

RANCH AUTOMOBILES.

Great Changes Wrought by Motor Cars In Western Texas.

"I have just returned from a tour of the great ranching regions of western Texas," said the salesman to a representative of the Houston Post, "and as it is my custom to make that belt at least twice every year it comes easy for me to note the progress."

"No man who has not visited it in recent months can even surmise the great change worked by the automobile. Why, the latter has now brought points more than a hundred miles distant from the railroads into the closest touch with civilization. What used to be days of travel between distant ranches and railway stations is now merely a matter of a very few hours."

"Nearly all the ranchmen own their automobiles, and you can see them skimming the broad prairie in every direction, at times frightening the jack rabbits and the coyotes, and striking consternation to the hearts of boot ovis and rattlesnakes."

"With the passing of the cowboy has almost come the passing of the cow pony, too, for on several big ranches I actually saw men rounding up the herds in automobiles."

CAT A BIRD'S CHIEF ENEMY.

Professor Hodge of Clark University Urges Feline Extermination.

Professor Clifton F. Hodge, biologist at Clark university, in Worcester, Mass., has come out urging the extermination of all cats by municipalities, declaring they are the worst existing enemy of bird life, says a Worcester dispatch to the New York Tribune.

"This has become a matter of national consequence," says Professor Hodge, "and demands the attention of cities as well as of people in the country. I have given much attention to this subject, and I am firmly convinced the cat is the worst enemy the bird has. Not excepting the severities of winter, scourges of disease that might prevail in bird families and all other enemies of bird life combined, the cat is the arch fiend of them all and stands at the head of the list as a destroyer of bird life. We need the German method of cat traps like those that in one year killed 30,000 cats in Hamburg."

As horses are too slow for the gold finders in the west, an automobile seating fifteen passengers has been put in operation between Bull Frog and Las Vegas, one of the new mining towns in California. It covers the 130 miles of bad roadway about four times as fast as was ever done by horse drawn stages.

WOOD ALCOHOL CAUSES DEATH

First Mate of Yacht Evelyn Takes an Overdose, Dying in Agony.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 19.—City Health Officer Edward Gulon went aboard the pleasure yacht Lady Evelyn and learned from Captain James Pierce that the first mate of the yacht had died suddenly from an overdose of wood alcohol. The yacht is owned by a man named McMahon, and the dead first mate was Thomas Clark, aged 46 years, of Norfolk, Va. He had been drinking heavily for several days. When about ten miles off the city he was seized with convulsions and expired soon after. Dr. Gulon was summoned by the captain of the yacht, which stood off the city. The yacht drew too much water to enter the inlet. Dr. Gulon went to it in a launch. There were no suspicious circumstances.

Home Health Club

By DAVID H. REEDER, Ph. D., M. D.
La Porte, Ind.

For some time I have been promising instructions upon the subject of infant feeding. Some of the young mothers are beginning to get impatient at the delay. But as that season of the year is now with us in which it is supposed that the greatest care must be maintained in regard to the diet of the little folks, I will proceed to give a series of lessons on infant feeding which will, I believe, answer all demands.

The principal thought seems to be that in proper feeding lies the whole secret of success in rearing healthy children, and I am inclined to concur in the belief, adding thereto cleanliness. With these two elements properly looked after, we need not greatly fear the so-called "children's diseases," and especially summer complaint or diarrhoea, which appears to be the ailment most dreaded of all. Having decided to accede to the request, and in order to do the matter justice, will, in all probability, give the lectures a somewhat technical form, although I shall endeavor to follow the lines I have hitherto laid down, and make my meaning as plain as possible.

Some mothers appear totally ignorant of that which should constitute their own diet, to say nothing of that of their helpless little ones. They do not seem to realize that the nursing babe must of necessity be affected by what they themselves take into their stomachs. Is not your own flesh and blood made from the food which you eat? Then admitting, as you must, that this is a self-evident fact, does it not stand to reason that the portion extracted by the nursing child must also be derived from the same source?

What, then, can be expected of the baby when the mother indulges to the fullest extent in such foods as pork, sausages, ham, fried potatoes, fine white bread, tea, coffee, or beer, cakes, pies and fried doughnuts.

One mother complained that her child's teeth did not develop, and that those which appeared soon turned black and crumbled away like chalk. She was asked as to her diet, previous to the birth of the child and during the time it was nursing. She said it was white bread and butter, coffee and fried potatoes, but mostly fried potatoes. I trust that those of my readers who follow my lectures from week to week will not need to question further as to the cause of the early decay. While it is true that the nursing mother must give to the child that of which she partakes, yet the child gets the best elements of that food, and will not suffer as much as the mother will.

Out of 3,000 cases carefully observed, less than three per cent. of the deaths from diarrhoea was of nursing children—that is, children nursed by their mothers, while the remaining 97 per cent. was among children that were on prepared baby foods, cow's milk or mixed diet. Nevertheless, the nursing mother or wet nurse should carefully study the subject of diet and give the child, not a fighting chance to live, but the best food possible for its sustenance and development. Nothing of an offensive or injurious nature should be tolerated, but that which will suffice to keep her in good health, so that she does not suffer from indigestion, constipation or anemia. There should be no alterations in her weight, and she should not be so burdened with household cares as to cause her to become overheated, overtired, anxious or angry. A nursing mother once became very angry and soon after, as the paroxysm subsided, took up her infant son and allowed him to nurse. In less than 12 hours the child died of acute diarrhoea. Another mother was overworked on a hot summer day; but the baby cried for its dinner, and it was permitted to nurse. A few hours later diarrhoea set in, and was with difficulty arrested, when the child was almost at death's door. And yet these mothers could hardly believe it was their own condition which caused all the trouble.

As a general food an abundance of milk is good for nursing mothers; but in cases where it causes constipation, it must be diluted with one-fourth its quantity of hot water, so as to render all of it at blood heat, and it must then be sipped slowly. If then the constipation or biliousness persists, which is not likely, its use should be discontinued.

Gruels and broths are excellent, and such nourishing foods as lean meats (no veal or pork), eggs, vegetables and fruits. Even sour fruits do not have an unfavorable effect upon the child, provided the digestion of the mother is good, but the tendency seems to be to stimulate activity of the bowels. Such drinks as tea, coffee, beer, wine, or liquors of any kind, should be as religiously avoided as you would withhold them from a child of greater age.

In order to pander to their own depraved appetites, wet nurses sometimes demand ale, beer or porter with their meals, on the fallacious idea that the quantity of milk is thereby improved. This is untrue; the quantity may be increased, but the quality is not nearly so good as that produced by drinking pure water. It is necessary to partake of an abundance of liquid, but the best results will be secured by taking it in the form of fruit juices, soups, milk, or water. Most vegetables are composed largely of water, however, and they furnish a large portion of the fluid required.

The condition of the child and its ability to digest its milk tells the story of right or wrong in the mother's diet, and while it is not wise to experiment in such matters merely for the gratification of science, yet the effects of certain foods upon the child should be very closely watched by the mother, if the diet of the mother is poor, meager the child will be poorly nourished, or else the mother will grow poor and anemic. Later, however, the child is also sure to show it in slow development, either mental or physical.

There are certain drugs which should, in my humble opinion, be avoided at all times, but there are some that should never be taken by nursing mothers, who have the lives or even the welfare of the helpless one in their hands. There are not many drugs that will pass from the mother into the stomach of her little child unchanged, through the milk, but belladonna, morphine, opium and other alkaloids, together with iodine and its preparations, mercury and its salts, salicylic acid, antimony, senna, rhubarb, sulphur, castor oil, scammony, anionium, salts, copaliba, garlic, turpentine, and wormwood, with several other drugs with similar penetrative powers, are exerted directly through the milk, and have been known to affect the child very markedly, within a few hours from the time of nursing. The drug does not make its appearance in the milk for about four days after having been partaken of, but may continue to be excreted for several days. Eventually, however, the child gets the principal portion of the dosage of such drugs as I have enumerated. In the succeeding lecture I will describe the next step in infant feeding, and the best means of artificial feeding, after which the foods and methods to be used during the weaning period will be considered.

CLUB NOTES.

If Mrs. J. P. of Mayger, Ore., will write again, giving her full name, I will cheerfully answer her letter to the best of my ability.

New Jersey.—Dr. David H. Reeder, LaPorte, Ind.—Dear Doctor: As I see you for some time publish remedies sent in by readers, I take the liberty of giving one which is said to be very good for pneumonia. It is so simple it is worth while, perhaps, when everything else has failed. This simple remedy has never failed to cure this too often fatal malady. Usually two or three applications will be sufficient, but continue always until perspiration starts freely from the chest. This remedy was formulated many years ago by one of the best physicians New England has ever known. It is also an excellent croup remedy when applied to the throat. Take six onions, chop fine, put into a large spider over a hot fire, add vinegar and rye meal enough to form a thick paste. Stir it thoroughly, letting it simmer from five to ten minutes. Put into a cotton bag large enough to cover the lungs and apply to the chest as hot as can be borne. In about ten minutes change the poultice. In a few hours the patient will be out of danger.

Here is another remedy called onion sirup which is excellent for croup, and brings instant relief. Put a layer of sliced onion in an earthen dish on the back of the stove. Then a layer of sugar until dish is filled. Let simmer slowly and give sirup to drink. When children at night will awaken screaming, as they sometimes do when suffering with worms, a drop of turpentine on a lump of sugar, or even the smell of turpentine will give relief at once.

Your articles are very interesting, and they must surely help many to a better manner of living. Hope you will in time write more on sleeping with plenty of fresh air. This is one of the things people take to very slowly, but would have confidence in, if it comes from the Home Health Club. Thanking you for the good advice that you have given us, I am, yours truly, L. A.

The topic referred to in a previous lecture, which is an herb compound, would be excellent for the fermentation. The rest of the regime followed in the case mentioned is excellent; they should also observe the rules of thorough mastication, as given in last week's lecture, and no liquids at meal-time, but continue the abundance of fresh water between meals.

I thank you for the kind words you say in regard to the Home Health Club and also for the contribution to club notes. It is a coincidence that the very same recipe was printed not very long ago, being sent to us from New England by a club member. It will not harm to repeat it, however, as quite a number of the readers have written to me recently asking for the formula. It is an excellent remedy for affections of the throat and chest.

All readers of this paper are at liberty to write for information pertaining to the subject of health. All communications should be addressed to Dr. David H. Reeder, LaPorte, Ind., and must contain name and address in full and at least four cents in postage.

PLAN TO RAISE COTTON IN BRITISH COLONIES

Manufacturers Start Movement to Encourage Growers to Cultivate the Staple for Home Market.

Washington, July 19.—An apparently well organized movement started by the cotton manufacturers of Great Britain to encourage the growth of cotton in the British possessions and countries other than the United States, where natural conditions favor cultivation, is reported to the department of commerce and labor by Consul Halstead of Birmingham, England. This movement is being directed by the British Cotton Growers' association and was started to liberate the British cotton trade from the danger of American speculation.

The demand for cotton steadily increases, but so far, the consul says, there has been no corresponding development of the sources of supply. The huge crop produced in the United States has relieved the situation, but American planters, the report points out, desire to maintain prices by reducing the production. The international cotton congress, in session in Manchester a few weeks ago, assumed that in ten years 38,000,000 acres under cotton will be necessary to supply the world's demand, and the United States will be able to provide only 35,000,000 and that the limit will be reached within seven years.

India, Africa, the West Indies, Borneo, Lagos and Cyprus have such natural condition that cotton may be raised there with good results. To promote the interest in the movement the British Cotton-Growers' association has opened in London an exhibition where the products of the English colonies are shown.

EIGHTEEN RAILROADS MUST ANSWER IN COURT

Interstate Commerce Commission Endeavors to Enforce Equitable Rates on Live Stock.

Chicago, July 19.—The interstate commerce commission has instituted suit against eighteen western railroads which have ignored the order, issued a year ago by the commission, that the rates of freight on live stock must not be higher than the rates on dressed beef and other packing house products.

About two months ago the commission filed a bill in the federal court here asking that an order be issued restraining railroads from violating the order of the commission. In the second suit, which has just been instituted, the same charges are made against the railroads of unlawfully maintaining discriminating rates, but this suit is brought under the Elkins amendment to the act to regulate commerce, which makes it the duty of the court to summarily inquire into the circumstances, and upon being satisfied of the allegations of the commission, the court must compel the railroads to stop their illegal practices.

The railroads named as defendants in the new suit are the Great Western, Burlington, Northwestern, Alton, Rock Island, Illinois Central, Minneapolis & St. Louis, Missouri, Kansas & Texas, Missouri Pacific, Wabash, Wisconsin Central and subsidiary corporations of the big systems. The suit was filed before Judge Betha, who has given the railroads until August 5 to file their answers.
